

Propaganda and the Cold War

John Boardman Whitton, ed. Public Affairs Press. 119 pp. $3.50.

Among the contributors to this volume, which addresses itself to the role of information as an arm of American policy, are Frederick C. Barghoorn, George Gallup, George V. Allen, Allen W. Dulles and Karl E. Mundt. Businessmen, publicists and members of non-governmental propaganda agencies also give their views in the collection.

The Congressman: His Work as He Sees It

Charles L. Clapp. Brookings Institution. 452 pp. $6.00.

This study has its roots in discussions carried on by a "cross section" of the members of the House of Representatives who were brought together by the Brookings Institution to evaluate their legislative experience. Although the 36 participants are identified by name in the introduction, the source of quoted material is not identified.

The Press and Foreign Policy

Bernard C. Cohan. Princeton. 288 pp. $6.00.

The newspaper press as "observer" of world events and as "participant" and "catalyst" in the foreign policy-making process is the concern here. Interviews with government officials and reporters form the basis of the study.

Arms and Stability in Europe

Alastair Buchan and Philip Windsor. Praeger. 236 pp. $5.00.

An international study group collaborated in the preparation of this report which deals with arms policy in Western Europe and the effect such policy can have upon relaxing tension between NATO and Warsaw Pact countries. The Institute for Strategic Studies in London, for whom this book was published, was one of three research centers to cooperate in the endeavor.

The Social Aspects of Nuclear Anxiety

Stewart Meacham. American Friends Service Committee. 23 pp. 25 cents.

The Human Crisis

Milton Mayer. American Friends Service Committee. 8 pp. 10 cents.

Both pamphlets deal with what the authors consider the crisis of contemporary man: Stewart Meacham, in a reprint of a speech delivered before the American Psychiatric Association, discusses the "irrational and erratic response to nuclear anxiety" which this age has fostered; and Mr. Mayer's sermon treats of the suspension of spiritual values in Americans' consideration of world problems.
